By re-examining the prevalent museological practices, this collaborative project will augment the understanding of curators about tangible and intangible heritage. Additionally, it will sensitize them to the pluralistic nature of Indian society, thereby enabling them to undertake measures to showcase artefacts of various marginalized communities and cultures.

“Public Humanities and Pedagogy in the Global South: Challenges and Directions”

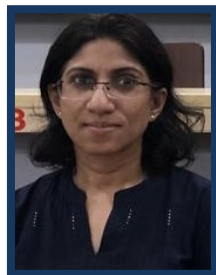

The project attempts to address the broad challenges that face higher education the world over and more specifically looks at the experiences of Higher Education in the global south . In doing so, it would address the gap between policy and actual practice and provide a fresh set of possibilities for both creative pedagogy and for the larger discipline of Public Humanities.
